Page No.
Date

5 The narrator's grandmother was a loving person with a kind and gentle soul. Although her values differed from those of the narrator, she never sought to cause any harm.

Each day, the grandmother's happiest moment was feeding the birds. How delighted she felt when the tiny birds twittered and frolicked around her ~~?~~ !

It was at this time when she was contented and truly at peace.

4.2 The author and the narrator have an ever-changing relationship with its simple twists and turns synchronous with the intricate ups and downs of life. Living in the same room, the grandmother used to help her grandson get ready while saying her prayers hoping he too would pick up on them.

She was short, fat and not too good looking but she did all she could for her grandchild. Soon, however, as times changed, he began learning more and more about many subjects including music.

He eagerly awaited to tell his grandmother of his newfound knowledge, but she was a person of old values. She scorned modern education and considered music to be below ~~the~~ a man of class.

This led to an ~~es~~ enstrangement and they wouldn't talk for a long while. When the author returned, his grandmother met him, and although he might not have felt it she must have been ecstatic with joy. With her last wish to meet her grandson fulfilled, she prepared to greet Death with open arms, knowing her time had come.

Page No.
Date

Name: Ojas Kulkarni
Class: 11th
Date: 9th September, 2024
Exam: Unit Test - I
Subject: English

Section A: Reading

Q1. 1. 4. performance demand in all fields

2. 4. All of the above

3. 2. decision roles

4. 1. management

5. 4. abstract

6. 3. Survey

'Now Hiring! Sales Executives.'

Herbal India Ltd.

Handsome Salaries!

Two vacancies. Intelligent, quick, optimistic adults required with a minimum of two years of experience in the sales department
First Interview Round on: 20th September, 2024.
Contact 8573333110 for details.

Page No.
Date

Section C:

3.2 The poetess' mother's laugh was one of nostalgia and reminescence. The lively, bright memories of her youthful past filled her with joy; as her heart took her back to that day.

Her laugh indicates her optimism, good relations with her sisters and the longing to revisit her happiest memories.

3. As a nine-year-old boy, Aram shows a keen understanding of values, notably those which matter most to his family.

~~He~~ The most important values and traits of the Garoglanian family of Armenia are their pride and honesty.

We see further truth in this statement when ~~or~~ Aram ~~scoffer~~ scoffs and boldly dismisses the idea of anyone in his family being involved in theivery (even the most eccentric of the lot.)

4 As the narrator, - a nine old boy named Aram - first saw his cousin Mourad and the majestic horse, he couldn't belive his eyes. Aram was awestruck. A horse was a thing of his wildest dreams.

He began to wonder if his cousin had stolen the horse.